

UAE Base Station Communications Huawei

Overview

Is Huawei partnering with UAE telecommunications industry?

Cooperation between the UAE telecommunications industry and Huawei is deep. Emirati telecom company du inked a deal with Huawei to provide 5G network services back in October 2019, according to du's chief technology officer, Saleem Alblooshi.

Does UAE have a 5G network?

Emirati telecom company du inked a deal with Huawei to provide 5G network services back in October 2019, according to du's chief technology officer, Saleem Alblooshi. Huawei showed off its capabilities last year in cooperation with du when it broadcast the UAE's President's Cycling Cup using 5G.

Is Huawei partnering with Etisalat?

Just a few weeks ago at the Mobile World Congress in Spain, Huawei signed an agreement with both du and Emirati telecom firm Etisalat to jointly provide 5G edge computing services, which involves moving "traffic and services from a centralised cloud to the edge of the network and closer to the customer," Juniper networks reported.

Is the UAE a good target for foreign military and intelligence services?

The UAE is a good target for foreign military and intelligence services. In fact, if any intelligence relationship is growing quickly, it's the relationship between the UAE and Israel.

Does the UAE have military ties with China?

The UAE is unlikely to pursue abrupt increases in institutional and operational military ties with the Chinese because of its longstanding participation in U.S.-led exercises and shared security interests with countries such as Greece, Egypt, and Israel. However, that history may not prevent it from cooperating with the Chinese behind the scenes.
